they force a man to search deeper and longer for answers. For to pursue the doubts is to come upon some exciting beliefs and truths. Where doubts plague a man and hamper his beliefs, there such a person has stopped short in his mental journey. He has settled for the pain of doubt rather than stretch life to the possibility of belief. The man who has some doubts probing his mind will come out better than the man who feels he has all his dou-

Boss's head. Maybe that was it. "I just wish I knew what else that sinister force was up to. We all know it erased the 18 minutes from the tape. But it's frightening to think of what other disasters it has caused."

"Well," No. 1 said, lifting up a corner of the rug. "I heard Al Haig say the night before last that he thought it might be responsible for the energy crisis, inflation, the Middle East war, the raisin shortage and the Redskins' slump."

"You know how those sinister forces are, always looking to stir up trouble."

"What I really don't understand is how the sinister force got in here in the first place. What with all the security checks and the FBI and the CIA and the plumbers and everything, it must be pretty sharp."

"Personally," No. 2 said as he took a quick look inside his briefcase, "I figure it must have something to do with a Democrat left over from the previous administration, unless of course it's really just Walter Cronkite."

"All I know is that something had better be done about it pretty quickly or the whole country will fall apart. Nobody even wants to impose a price ceiling or ban anything anymore for fear the sinister force will do something terrible."

"I don't know what things are coming to around here. After all, who knows what evil lurks in the minds of men?"

No. 1 and No. 2 looked up sharply as a voice boomed from out of nowhere: "The sinister force knows."
